

Labyrinth Around America

A journey of connections

Labyrinth Around America is a venture like no other.

English labyrinth enthusiast and interfaith minister Clive Johnson is taking a labyrinth – a 24 foot diameter canvas intended for walking meditation – around the 33 States that form the border of the United States.

Starting in Minnesota, where the labyrinth was made, the canvas is on a road trip to unknown places, stopping at the smallest villages and in the hearts of the largest cities.

The hope is to involve people from as many different backgrounds as possible.

The beauty of the labyrinth is that it appeals to anyone and everyone, making no judgements about who may have walked it before, nor about their faith or background. It has no political agenda.

Unlike a maze, the labyrinth is a single path that leads the walker to its center without distractions and dead-ends. It is a wonderful space for meditating alone, but also with others.

Walking a labyrinth offers an opportunity to escape from the day-to-day for a short while. It's a practice that's been followed by countless people from many cultures over many centuries.

The project invites people who may be unaware of this wonderful practice (as well as those who are) to have an opportunity to join a walk, and to learn about the beauty, history, and appeal of labyrinths.

The project also hopes to leave what a 'trail of positive energy', circling around this great country with a purpose for bringing folks together. Everyone who comes to a walk leaves something of their own energy to it, and plays an important part in the labyrinth's long journey.

Please come along and share in the adventure!
